Detailed Action

Responds to Remark

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

1. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

2. Claims 38-46 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the language of each claim raises a question as to whether the claim is directed merely to an abstract idea that is not tied to a technological art, environment or machine which would result in a practical application producing a concrete, useful, and tangible result to form the basis of statutory subject matter under 35 U.S.C. 101.
3. At claim 38, it listed several multimedia streaming data rate calculations, message reports, servers and clients and is not limited to tangible embodiments. In view of Applicant's disclosure, specification pages 14-17, the medium is not limited to tangible embodiments (e.g. mathematical equation) , instead being defined as including both tangible embodiments (e.g. computer readable equipment) and intangible embodiments (e.g. software). As such, the claim is not limited to statutory subject matter and is therefore non-statutory. One skilled in the art clearly would not know how to use the claimed invention. In view device medium that will be used for the storage and experiment. Therefore, it is impossible for the specification to teach how to use the invention.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

4. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

Claim 38 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention.

Claim 38, for claiming the server in response to receiving the feedback report estimating and calculating a data rate. The specification is not enabling to make or use by either a "specific, substantial and credible" asserted utility or a well established utility for deriving a claimed method.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

Art Unit: 2142

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 38-46 are rejected under 35 USC 102(e) as being anticipated by Lin et al., (U.S. Patent No. 6405256).

3. Regarding claim 38, Lin teaches a method of determining a multimedia streaming data rate in a communication network, comprising:

- sending stream multimedia data at a first data rate between a server and a client using a transport protocol (Lin, col.5, l.7-13)
- sending a feedback report from the client to the server utilizing the transport protocol, the feedback report at least including information regarding the amount of data received at the client (Lin, col.8, l.35-36);
- the server in response to receiving the feedback report estimating the amount of data buffered in the network based on the difference between the amount of data sent from the server and the information in the feedback report regarding the amount of data received at the client (Lin, col.8, l.36-37)

- calculating a second data rate from the estimated amount of data buffered in the network (Lin, col.8, l.50-55)
 - sending the streaming multimedia data at the second data rate between the server and the client (Lin, fig.4, col.8, l.54-55).
4. Regarding claim 39, Lin further discloses the method as recited in claim 38, further comprising adjusting the estimate amount of data buffered in the network by an uplink delay compensation value (Lin, col.8, l. 54-55).
 5. Regarding claim 40, Lin further discloses the method as recited in claim 38, wherein the uplink delay compensation value is determined by the amount of data sent out by the server during a select period of time (Lin, col.8, l.35-36).
 6. Regarding claim 41, Lin further discloses the method as recited in claim 39, further comprising calculating an average data receive rate at the client;
 - wherein the feedback report includes the average data receive rate (Lin, col.2, l.65-67) ; and
 - wherein the uplink delay compensation value is determined at least with the average data receive time (Lin, col.3, l.1-7) .
 7. Regarding claim 42, Lin further discloses the method as recited in claim 38, wherein the server sends the streaming multimedia data at a third rate if a feedback report is not received from the client at by predetermined time (Lin, col.3, l.14-16).
 8. Regarding claim 43, Lin further discloses the method as recited in claim 38 further comprising the step of pausing the sending of the streaming multimedia data from the server if a feedback report is not received from the client by a predetermined time (Lin, col.8, l.10-12, which indicates the request signal not being sent (pausing), if the buffer is empty, i.e. no any multimedia data packet is available).

9. Regarding claim 44, Lin further discloses the method as recited in claim 38, wherein the client sends the feedback report to the server at a fixed time interval (Lin, col.8, l.31-32).
10. Regarding claim 45, Lin further discloses the method as recited in claim 38, wherein the client sends the feedback report to the server at a random interval having a mean based on a predefined distribution function (Lin, col.9, l.42-45).
11. Regarding claim 46, Lin further discloses the method as recited in claim 38, wherein the client sends the feedback report to the server upon the trigger of a certain data packet arrival at the client (Lin, col.8, l.34-37).

Conclusion

Application's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MEPE 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first replay is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTH from the date of this final action.
